Disaster Recovery
Mobile Device ManagamentBusiness Continuity Business Continuity or Disaster Recovery is a vitally important consideration which is often overlooked. Having a seamless and well organised plan can save your business time and money in the event of a disaster.Business Continuity Disasters can happen to any business at any time and the downtime they can cause can be incredibly damaging to the core business and many organisations don't even survive such events. Disasters can come in many forms, including fires, floods, fraud, ransomware, cyber-attacks, power interruptions, system failures, human error, acts of terror and natural events like flash flooding and tornadoes amongst others. Could your company survive without an IT system? IT is now a fundamental aspect of a business' day-to-day operations; failing to plan ahead or deal with major system issues could have wide implications for your business. Many insurers now require businesses to have some form of Disaster Recovery or Business Continuity plan. Disaster Recovery (DR) generally relates to minimal down time and little or no loss of critical data; Business Continuity (BC) alternatively allows for longer down times and an element of data loss. To overcome this, IT Works offer work space recovery so that your business can quickly become operational in the event of a disaster. Featuring state of the art workstations, high speed fibre internet, printing/fax facilities, air conditioning and business telephony, our recovery suite can provide a guaranteed work space for your staff. Good network design is essential to deliver efficient I.T. systems which assist your business to grow and develop without lost hours due to down time and delays.Networking Any business is only as productive as its weakest link – don't let that link be your company network. An unreliable (or, even worse, broken) inter-company network can cripple a business while directly affecting the bottom line. Ensuring your network makes sense for your business while maintaining proper connectivity and permissions is what our certified IT professionals do best through our computer network services. IT Works has the knowledge and experience gained from working with some of the largest companies to make your network work for you.
